

Chubb Marine Hurricane Preparation

Climate experts at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) continue to predict active Atlantic hurricane seasons in the coming years. We could experience a number of named storms each year, several of which may have the potential to become major hurricanes. These predictions reinforce the need for boaters in hurricane-prone regions to have preparation plans in place.

Boat owners and the marine community should take proactive measures to minimize the potential for injuries and damage to their boats and other property. Chubb Recreational Marine Insurance® is pleased to offer its list of important tips to help recreational boaters protect their vessels as well as other property on board during the hurricane season. Remember, key factors in protecting your boat from a hurricane or any severe storm are planning, preparation and timely action.
