Cover Employee Theft with Travelers

Employee theft can take many forms. Consider these scenarios:

An insured's employee and an outside accomplice stole copper pipes from inventory, which was subsequently discovered at a local salvage yard.

A vice president of finance created false invoices from a vendor, then substituted the check that was issued payable to the vendor with a check payable to himself in the same amount. When the cancelled checks came in, he replaced the cancelled check payable to him with the un-cashed check payable to the vendor for the false invoice. The usual review of the bank statements and cancelled checks failed to reveal the scheme. The VP was caught when the bank noticed that the checks started matching in code.

Here are some statistics for your consideration:

- The typical organization loses five percent of its revenues to fraud each year.
- The average loss caused by employee dishonesty is $140,000 with one in every five cases reporting a loss of at least $1M.
- It averages 18 months to discover a fraud scheme.
- Background checks, even when they are used, are of little help to employers to mitigate fraud. Most occupational fraudsters are first-time offenders with clean employment histories.
- Up to 75% of all employees steal at least once and half of those steal multiple times. 55% of employee theft is done by managers.
